

GI Psychology is a passionate team of telehealth clinicians dedicated to improving the lives of individuals with gastrointestinal disorders and other complex medical conditions. We provide data-driven interventions and treatments, collaborating closely with interdisciplinary teams to make a meaningful impact for our patients and communities. Our mission is to increase nationwide access to quality gastro psychology services. Join us in a journey where you can further cultivate your professional and clinical abilities and make a significant impact in advancing the field of health psychology.

The Role

You will have the unique opportunity to be at the forefront of delivering highly effective gut-brain psychotherapy while collaborating with expert GI providers throughout the nation. We thrive on continuous learning and consultation, making it an environment where you can truly excel while embodying our core values of integrity, innovation, and interpersonal generosity. Join us in making a meaningful impact on the lives of those in need while advancing your career in a supportive and growth-focused organization.

The Opportunity

Our opening for a Clinical Psychologist entails a 35-hour work week, inclusive of 22 clinical hours as well as internal and external collaboration, program development, community and provider outreach, and ongoing professional development. This clinical psychologist position offers an annual salary starting at $101,000 with opportunity for performance based bonuses. We provide robust clinical support so you can focus on the activities that excite you and have various pathways for advancement and leadership.

Who You Are

You are a Licensed Clinical Psychologist who identifies as a life-long learner and is energized by providing outcomes-driven psychotherapy to various age groups. You're not looking for a transition job; you're seeking a career where your sophisticated clinical skills and passion for increasing access to specialized behavioral health will be nurtured and valued. Join us in our mission to increase awareness and utilization of effective treatments for Disorders of the Gut-Brain Interaction.

How to Apply

If you're a Clinical Psychologist who is driven by the desire to excel, collaborate, and contribute to meaningful change, we want to hear from you. Please submit your resume and a letter connecting your clinical experience with your motivation to join GI Psychology and how you align with our values to admin@gipsychology.com.
